JÁNOS BOTOS is a historian and university associate professor. He completed his studies in history and philosophy at Eötvös Lóránd University (1966–1971). From 1971, he worked as a research historian, while teaching at various universities. In the course of his historical research, he initially examined the political history of the 19th and 20th centuries, and then from the mid-1980s onwards focused on the economic history of the period, and within this primarily the history of banking and inflation. In addition, he made a thorough study of the history of the Interior Ministry from 1867 to 1950. From the early 1990s, he examined the value of Jewish assets in Hungary, and the fate of these assets during and after the Second World War.
